

BRITISH WARSHIPS AT WORK

Destroyers foiled by searchlights as they are about to start a torpedo on its errand of destruction against the hostile battleships off a naval port.

From a drawing by C. M. Paddy.

The fight between the Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse and the Highflyer on August. 26. The ship in the centre is the Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse, the Highflyer is seen far off to the left.

Drawn by Norman Wilkinson from a description by Dr. J. C. Dick, surgeon on the New Zealand steamer Kaipara, sunk by the Germans. Until the action opened he was a prisoner on the commerce destroyer, when he was shifted to the collier Arucas where he made his sketch.
